MARC HARVEY

Dear Colleagues,

Each school building is different. But, each successful school is built in much the same manner. You take a skilled communicator, motivator, and teacher and make that person the principal. The principal engenders the respect of the best/most-respected teachers in the building by including them in the discussion and vision for the building. The students are greeted by genuine enthusiasm for learning on a daily basis and this translates into increased student achievement. It really isn't that difficult, in theory, to create a great school.

If it were easy, all schools would be deemed "successful". Leaving aside the debate over labeling a school a "failure", as judged by the almighty standardized MCAS statistics, it is not simplistic to actually create a great school.

But, there are some universally agreed upon prerequisites for success: accountability, professionalism, communication, and camaraderie. One of the methods we, administrators and teachers together, should use to address these prerequisites is to create a Faculty Senate in each building. Once monthly, on a set date, scheduled like all other meetings, the Building Leadership Team (which should include teachers, unless teachers cannot be leaders in a building?) would meet with the elected Faculty Senate (proportionate representation based on every ten teachers getting one representative) to discuss how best to collaborate to meet the vision of the school. This gives stakeholders an opportunity to provide valuable input and opens the lines of communication so needed in building spirit de corps.

It is in the interest of the building principal to have a sounding board so as to foresee pitfalls that can be easily avoided. The best principals are those who seek and act upon the counsel of the best teacher leaders in a building. It is hubristic to think that building principals will never make a mistake or will never clumsily handle implementation of a policy or program. It is also foolish to think that a principal has the capacity to see the entire picture of a school without receiving input from those who share the classrooms with our students. A routinized reasoned discussion (Faculty Senate) made a practical reality rather than a theoretical process produces a better product that builds upon those preconditions for student learning which is in the self-interest of all the stakeholders. I haven't heard a cogent argument yet of why this is not a good idea.

We should also hire in February to afford ourselves the best opportunity to attract new teacher leaders to our district.

Hope you all had a love filled Valentine's Day in February and plan to enjoy the gift of the Irish in March.

Sincerely,
Marc

The HEA was the recipient of a very generous gift this year. Our long time office copy machine made its last copy. This would have been a huge expense if not for the generosity of Marc Harvey who donated a new copier to the HEA. Mind you this is not like the printer you buy for your home computer but a COPY MACHINE!! Thank you to Marc and his family.

If called to a meeting with management read the following when it begins.
“If this discussion could in any way lead to my being disciplined or terminated, or affect my personal working conditions, I respectfully request that my union representative be present at this meeting. Until my representative arrives, I choose not to participate in this discussion.”

If the employer denies the request for union representation, and continues to ask questions, it commits an unfair labor practice and the employee has a right to refuse to answer. The employer may not discipline the employee for such a refusal but the employee must remain in the meeting though not answer questions.

I WAS LUCKY ENOUGH TO WITNESS A GREAT THING IN THE HAVERHILL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Teachers from many of our lower elementary grades met together well after school hours with HEA President Marc Harvey, to discuss and create what they know to be functional and properly informative progress reports. Marc brought the work back to the superintendants that saw the child centered value of their efforts.

When we speak up and work together, we can positively affect change in education.

THANK YOU TO ALL FROM TEACHER THROUGH SUPERINTENDANT WHO MADE THIS HAPPEN.
